Setback for Tobacco Companies: SCC

Tobacco companies sued by the province of B.C. for the health related costs of smoking have no reasonable third party cause of action against the federal government according to the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd., 2011 SCC 42. The court unanimously concluded it was plain and obvious that the companies' claims for negligent misrepresentation, negligent design and failure to warn, as well as at equity, had no reasonable chance of success. This decision is only one of what will likely be many on this issue, since several other provinces intend to launch similar suits or have already done so.

"Conscience" Alone Cannot Ground Legal Proceeding: MBQB

The court struck the application of a mathematics professor who challenged the University of Manitoba's decision to award a PhD to a student it exempted from writing the candidacy exam in Lukács v. Doering, 2011 MBQB 203. The court found that the applicant, who had no direct connection with the matter but argued that the decision undermined the academic integrity of the university, had neither private nor public interest standing to seek the relief claimed. The applicant failed to establish any direct, legitimate personal or private interest which would warrant standing and had not demonstrated any damages. He also failed to raise an issue regarding the invalidity of the University's governing legislation and thus had not met the first part of the three pronged test to establish public interest standing.

MPI Estopped From Denying Coverage Due to Adjuster's Error: MBQB

Test driving a car on the Gimli Speedway is a speed test within the meaning of regulation P215-M.R. 290/88R and would normally void insurance coverage according to the court in Paradis v. Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation, 2011 MBQB 168. In this case, however, MPI was estopped from denying coverage because the insured, relying on incorrect representations by the adjuster, had started expensive repairs to the vehicle. MPI, said the court, "could easily have protected itself against an adjuster's mistake by giving a clear warning on the estimate sheet that the provision of the estimate sheet should not be construed as an acknowledgment that coverage exists."

Practice Directions and Court Notice: QB

The Court of Queen's Bench has issued Practice Directions providing Guidelines Regarding Discovery of Electronic Documents and Guidelines for the Use of Technology in Civil Litigation. Both come into effect October 1, 2011. The former is intended to guide lawyers, parties and the judiciary in the e-discovery process and the latter addresses the problems of the exchange of discoverable documents in incompatible electronic formats and establishes default standards for exchange of electronic documents.

The court also issued a Notice re Books of Authority on June 30, 2011, requiring all such books to be indexed, bound, and with the authorities separated by numbered tabs.

Online Resources

Court websites can be a great source of scholarly writing on topics related to the justice system. See, for example, the From the Bench section of the Courts of Nova Scotia website, which assembles edited papers written by the Nova Scotia judiciary and others. These recently posted papers are all by Mr. Justice Jamie W.S. Saunders of the Nova Scotia Court of Appeal:

- A Series of Reflections on Persuasive Writing
- Reflections on the Art...and Science of Decision-Making
- Medical Evidence in General and Experts in Particular

The websites of those who oversee government are another good source for legal materials. The Office of the Privacy Commissioner of Canada, for example, has recently published PIPEDA and Your Practice - A Privacy Handbook for Lawyers. It "is designed to help lawyers maintain best practices in managing their collection, use and disclosure of personal information, and access thereto, in compliance with PIPEDA standards." It also addresses the application of PIPEDA in a civil litigation context.

Some Canadian law societies provide free online access to their educational materials. See, for example, the B.C. Professional Legal Training Course Practice Materials and selected CLE BC program articles (Practice Points).

Although the Civil Litigation Practice Materials and the article Overview of Privilege and Confidentiality are both written from a B.C. perspective, they contain a lot of practical information which Manitoba litigators may find useful.

Litigation Publications

These recent articles deal with litigation topics:

- Collecting and authenticating online evidence - online postings can be a gold mine for litigators, but standard rules of evidence concerning provenance and authenticity apply when dealing with them. This CBA Practice Link article outlines the techniques for collecting online evidence and establishing a chain of custody record. It also reviews how to find online information that has been removed and how to remove offending content from the web.

- How to choose an e-discovery tool and e-discovery vendor - this Canadian Lawyer article outlines the questions you need to ask when purchasing e-discovery tools and expertise.

- Responding effectively to judges in court - this Canadian Lawyer article from August 22, 2011 addresses the delicate subject of how to stay on your feet when challenged by a judge in court.

- Can class actions tackle social wrongs? - this Law Times article explores whether class actions might be more effective than test cases to challenge systemic problems faced by the disempowered.

- Litigation v. Arbitration - a July 2011 article from Lexpert magazine discussing the difficult decision of whether to go to court or engage in arbitration.

- No Harm Done - a National magazine article concerning the impact of certifying waiver of tort as a common issue on class action certification under Quebec civil law.
